The Granet, Club Competition

19 November

It was a cold frosty start for the early shooters; those with sense waited until the sun rose over the bank and gave a little heat on their backs.

The course of fire is straightforward: the targets face for three seconds then edge for seven and this happens five times. The competitors have to shoot one shot at each exposure returning to the ready position (45°) in between shots.

You get one run as a sighting series where you can go and see your shot holes then the competition starts.

One run of five exposures then repeat, then repeat again, and again, and again... Yes 30 exposures in total. Even the fit younger members said their muscles were beginning to burn towards the end.

It did not go without incident; both Nigel's had light strikes and lost a shot. Adrian forgot to cock his action and looked quite surprised when the rifle went click!

It was good to see probationer Paul D having a go, likewise to see Keith M drag himself out of his sick bed

Not everyone looked happy with their sighting shots.

The scores were extremely close with just two points separating the top four places. Congratulations to Ian for a fine win, but then he has history in this event, winning it at Bisley a few years back.
